

MESSAGE OF GOOD WILL BROUGHT BACK BY TRADE BOOSTERS

Retail Merchants Given Hearty
Reception in Southern Section of Maryland.

EFFECT OF TRIPS EVIDENT

Leonardtown Speaker Tells How Better Acquaintance
Means Much to Capital.

The business men who participated in yesterday's boosting expedition of the Retail Merchants' Association brought back with them a cheerful message from the people of Leonardtown, which made them feel that their annual tours of southern Maryland during the past three years have not been in vain.

The message was given them by Gen. A. Allison Williams, an old resident of St. Mary's county, who had them farewell last night on behalf of the people of his community.

"Gentlemen," said General Williams, "while we feel very proud of our fine commercial city of Baltimore, we realize that our closeness to you, as well as a fine State road, connects us with the Capital of the greatest nation on earth and makes it their logical buying place.

"Through your visits the people here are learning that the merchants of Washington are able to supply them with their farming and household commodities, and I bid you farewell with the hope that you will continue to enjoy the good will and trade of the people of southern Maryland."

Good-Will Fostered.

The same sentiment was expressed by Ross P. Andrews, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, who addressed the boosters after they had partaken of an old-fashioned country dinner at St. Mary's Hotel, Leonardtown.

"Up to a few years ago," said Mr. Andrews, "the people of this part of Maryland felt that the merchants of Washington were a set of high brow, I believe that by these booster trips we have changed that feeling. I believe we have made them feel that we want their trade, and that we are willing to come more than half way to get it."

Joseph Strasburger, first president of the Retail Merchants' Association, and Charles J. Columbus, present secretary of the organization, also spoke.

A party of representatives of the Y. M. C. A. went on yesterday's trip, adding a new phase to the boosting idea, by seeking to aid young men of Maryland who desire to come to Washington to make their start in life.

William Knowles Cooper, secretary of the association, said that at nearly every stop made during the day some resident was found who agreed to notify the association of any young man in that community who was considering coming to Washington, in order that the association might help him upon his arrival.

Holiday Spirit Over All.

A holiday spirit prevailed in every town at which the boosters stopped. Daunting in with automobile sirens screaming, the boosters would stop in front of the village store and scatter souvenirs and pamphlets to the residents while the band played lively tunes.

From Good Hope, D. C., to Leonardtown, stops were made at the following places: Silver Hill, Camp Springs, Clinton, E. B. Brandywine, Waldorf, Bryantown, Hughesville, Charlotte Hall, Mechanicsville, Helen Morganza and Loveville.

Welcomed at Charlotte Hall.

At Charlotte Hall the boosters were greeted by the students of Charlotte Hall Military Academy.

Among those who made the trip were R. P. Andrews, J. J. Bartman, J. W. Taylor, R. C. Smith, Gus Brahm, C. W. Hoover, W. F. Deane, J. E. Croft, Walter Hawley, Gus Gumpert, David Foster, Ernest Johnson, George Ferguson, Joseph Berberich, E. C. Rogers, A. H. Linde, Fred A. Scholz, G. Hines, M. A. Leese, Noah Warwick, C. J. Waters, R. G. Johnson, Joseph Strasburger, Louis Levy, W. V. Killian, William Brice, William E. Russell, Clifford L. Johnson, Charles E. Minor, George L. Goodwin, W. K. Cooper, William Henderson, H. V. Alexander, J. Woodfield, R. W. King, W. B. Frank, A. J. Rose, W. J. Cooper, C. A. Middleton, S. H. B. Homer, Fred A. Scholz, James T. Ryan, Jr., James T. Ryan, Jr., John A. Myers, W. F. Redman, R. V. Israel, George W. Miller, Howard S. Plisk, C. J. Warwick, Philip J. Orme, and J. R. Guay.

Border Service Brings Promotions to Many

Companies K and L Boast the Largest Assortments of Brothers Among District Guardsmen—Anecdotes of Camp Life Among Militia From the Capital.

By Staff Correspondent.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 18.—Border service has brought promotion and consequent increase of pay to a number of members of the District militia. The promotions announced by Colonel Young include the following:

Corporal Just C. Jensen, Company D, made sergeant in Headquarters Company.

Private Charles Birch, Company D, made corporal in same company.

Corporal Joseph A. Dubois, Company H, made sergeant and private John Mace made corporal in the same company.

Corporal Michael Horrigan made sergeant in Machine Gun Company, with a similar elevation for Corporal Samuel Melick.

Privates Alfred P. Leyburn, Maurice McDonnell, and Henry D. Smith, all of the Machine Gun Company, have been made corporals.

Sergeant Lloyd Crandall has been transferred from the Headquarters Company to Company D, with the rank of corporal, without prejudice.

Sergeant W. J. Myers of company H, has been reduced to the ranks.

Private Incoos an Orderly:

Private Garnett Incoos, of the Headquarters Company, has been detailed by Capt. E. W. Fullam, regimental adjutant, to be an orderly for Brig. General R. Hill, Illinois National Guard, commanding the Second Division, of which the District militia is a unit. Private Incoos was selected for this important detail, which is considered a compliment, because of his soldierly bearing and understanding of military affairs.

Where Brothers Abound.

Companies K and L of the District militia have the largest number of "sets of brothers" of any command at Camp Wilson. There are five sets in Company L and three in K. In most of the eight instances one brother is a private and the other a corporal or sergeant.

The personnel of the "brotherhood" is as follows in Company L:

Sergeant William A. Riley and Corporal Charles E. Riley.

Corporal Fred Widmayer and First-Class Private W. C. Widmayer.

Corporal James R. Steele and Private Louis H. Steele.

Private John L. Burdette and Private James Burdette.

Private Leonard F. Mortimer and Private William F. Mortimer, who enlisted in the National Guard two days before it entrained at Roslyn.

In addition to the brothers in Company L, Sergeant Charles H. Warder is the nephew of the first sergeant, James P. Sayer, and there is but three years difference in their ages.

In Company K, Private Fred Spender takes orders from Sergeant Henry Spender, but it is not known whether dog's name is and you tell him "Uno," and he replied "No, I do not tell me."

A man asked what "Ittywyah" and the other fellow replied "If I tell you you will buy a drink" and the questioning and answering is continued until an arm is crooked and one is two bits in and some one else is two bits out.

War College Men Here.

When Capt. E. W. Fullam, adjutant of the Third Regiment, visited Gen. Fred Funston's headquarters to pay his compliments with the other District militia officers, he thought he was at the Army War College at the foot of Seventh street. Captain Fullam holds an important and responsible position at the War College. Among the officers on duty at the headquarters of the Southern department are met a number of officers with whom he had been associated at the college.

The first of General Funston's aides to be recognized by Captain Fullam was Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, the dashing and handsome young cavalier, who was stationed at the War College at home, not cordial greetings and talked over old times. General Funston appeared and warmly welcomed the officers. In the course of his conversation General Funston said he had not been east of the Mississippi river for nine years, and hoped to get to Washington before he retired.

Among the other officers Captain Fullam met and with whom he had been associated in Washington were Major Connor, Major Lubach, Lieutenant Colonel Macfarland and Major Scindal. Captain Brice, adjutant to General Greene, commanding the Second division, had with him the District militia will have many dealings during its stay here, is also an old warm friend of Captain Fullam.

Because of his services at the War College, the officers at headquarters are holding out inducements to him to transfer his allegiance from the militia to the Southern department, but thus far he has resisted all their blandishments.

The Third Regiment without Captain Fullam would not look natural in the field.

Will Forego Strolls.

As a precaution against running his head against flying missiles or weapons, First Sergeant Haney, of the Machine Gun Company, has decided to take no strolls about Camp Wilson after dark. Members of the Machine Gun Company say the sergeant's bump of self preservation is overdeveloped.

Sergeant Haney's caution was born of a prank he played on the members of his company several days after they reached Camp Wilson.

The camp site is filled with big red ants, which cover and color the black earth in thousands of places. Some of the "tenderfeet" inquired of Sergeant

Haney "what are these big fellows camped here with us?" Sergeant Haney, who is a Texan by birth, replied: "They are barking ants. Get a handful of them and hold them up to your ear and you will hear them bark."

The unsuspecting Washingtonians, believing the "top sergeants" at all good soldiers should, gathered up handfuls of the red insects and placed them to their ears. But they did not hold the insects long, for each and every one of the ants took a big bite out of the holders' hands and were rudely dashed to earth.

As the militiamen who were "bitten" in more ways than one hurried to the hospital for treatment they swore vengeance on Sergeant Haney, and he knows enough about the personnel of the Machine Gun Company to "stay in" when the sun isn't protecting you."

Members of the Supply Company are loud in their praise of the red ants' strength. Every day the insects carry off several pounds of rice, a grain to a man, while First Sergeant Streeks is willing to sign an affidavit that he saw two of them carrying away an onion and later beheld four of them carrying a pound with a potato weighing about half a pound. Upon hearing these stories Capt. W. H. Chase, commanding the Supply Company, said:

"I want those sides of beef either anchored to a double guard with ball ammunition put over them. It is up to First Sergeant Streeks to decide how the regiment's foodstuffs shall be protected from camp plunderers."

And They All Bite.

"Ittywyah."

This queer looking word is puzzling Colonel Young and the officers of the Third Regiment who meet with him in the headquarters dining hall.

It is printed on pieces of cardboard, and is emblazoned in large letters, and commands attention from all who enter the dining room portals. The students, scholars, and linguists among the regimental officers have all had their guesses, and admitted their failure to solve the riddle. They are satisfied that it is not Latin, Greek, nor Sanskrit, but while they profess to know what it is they do not claim to know what it is.

Anxious inquirers pressed him for the solution, whereupon he replied:

"The first I is for, the second for the first pronoun I, the t for tell, the y for you, the e for eat, the w for the y for buy, the a for a and the d for drink. Put them all together and they mean 'If I tell you you will buy a drink.'"

Knowing Chaplain Smith's habits and associates, the officers are disinclined to believe that he has happened into the word unless it actually figured it out for himself.

"Ittywyah" is like the name "Uno" for a dog. A man asked what dog's name is and you tell him "Uno," and he replied "No, I do not tell me."

A man asked what "Ittywyah" and the other fellow replied "If I tell you you will buy a drink" and the questioning and answering is continued until an arm is crooked and one is two bits in and some one else is two bits out.

Militia Notes.

By Staff Correspondent.

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 14 (by mail).—The District boys are probably the most faithful letter writers at Camp Wilson. Every evening scores of letters can be seen at the Y. M. C. A. penning missives or addressing postcards or packages. They have purchased a great variety of trinkets and baubles, ranging from neckties made of rattlesnake skin and decorated with rattles, to armadillo shell baskets, and sent them back to the National Capital.

Although the militiamen marched to Fort Myer on June 21 with a deep antipathy toward Mexicans in their hearts, they have met scores of men and boys from across the border at Camp Wilson and have learned to like them. The Mexican men are employed as laborers in camp and are kept busy building roads, operating steam rollers, digging trenches for water pipes, and constructing stables and other buildings. Most of them are swarthy-skinned elderly men with a sad, faraway look in their eyes. They work in silence, seemingly paying no attention to the military activity going on about them. About 100 Mexican boys are in the camp, but few of them try to talk to the Mexicans, and few of the Washingtonians speak Spanish and the conversations are not lengthy.

The duties of the militiamen have not been exacting thus far, and no practice marches are in prospect for at least a week. Drilling here has been a continuation of work begun at Fort Myer, and the soldiers are acquiring new ideas with credit, notwithstanding the fact that Colonel Young and Capt. C. A. Lewis, inspector-instructor, are most exacting on the major, the captain, the lieutenant, non-commissioned officers and the men. The reputation of the Washingtonians as fornicators on the drill field has caused a large number of soldiers from other regiments to flock to the District camp to watch maneuvers. The guardsmen at sunset, one of the most difficult and impressive military ceremonies, have won salves of applause for the District boys.

Privates Joseph A. Ryan and John Hettkenkemmer have been made Corporals in Company A, and a sergeant in Company C.

THIS IS LAST YEAR OF REEVES' SHOW

Name Will Be Changed Next Season, Says Burlesque
Star at Gayety.

Al Reeves, whose name has been placed at the head of a burlesque show every season for more than a quarter of a century, has formally announced that this is the last year of the Al Reeves show as such!

The announcement was made yesterday afternoon at the Gayety Theater, where the Reeves show is playing this week. It does not mean that Reeves will retire from the stage. He states he intends to appear in certain places, Washington among them, when the show that belongs to him plays those cities. But he does not intend there shall be an Al Reeves show after the present season, and he decided on final arrangements yesterday for the renaming of his company.

"I have not quit the stage," Reeves states. "I don't suppose I'll ever quit. I will always be a performer in my show in some cities. But I will be a vaudeville act with the show. The show will go along with or without it. I find it can't be separated. I will always appear in the show in Washington."

Washington Home Town.

"This is like a home town to me. My mother lived here before she was married. I made my first appearance as an entertainer here, two years ago. Some of the people of Washington, business men, theatrical men, Government officials, and others I number among my best personal friends."

"But I am not doing the turn in this show that I did years ago. Once they said the show couldn't go on without Al Reeves played a banjo and did a song. I could do both. But there has been a big change in the amusement business."

"During the past few years we have introduced correct business methods into burlesque. It has done wonders for the business. The students, scholars, and linguists among the regimental officers have all had their guesses, and admitted their failure to solve the riddle. They are satisfied that it is not Latin, Greek, nor Sanskrit, but while they profess to know what it is they do not claim to know what it is."

SOARING SHOE PRICE IS BLAMED ON WAR

America's supplying of shoes for soldiers is the real answer to the rising price of footwear in this country, the Department of Commerce has announced. Because the United States has such a vast demand for the men in the trenches, and as leather imports have dropped, the prices here rose consequently, it was said.

Leather exported in 1914 was valued at $7,000,000, but this amount had jumped to $14,000,000 in the year ending last June.

Italy is a new leather customer, taking $14,000,000 worth in 1916. Aside from leather, the United States shipped more than 20,000,000 pairs of shoes to soldiers this year—better than double the 1914 figure.

Aside from the soldiers, there is another element—the Chinese are using shoes instead of sandals. Their business has tripled in the last year, now amounting to $32,000.

G. W. U. PLAY SEASON OPENS IN DECEMBER

Negotiations Now on to Obtain Rights on Productions.

The George Washington University players are to present their first production of the season at a local theater early in December, it was announced today.

The proceeds will be given to the student activities and probably some will be used for the maintenance of the university hospital.

Ernest Elkin has been elected business manager for the year. Henry J. Frelan, who directed "Disraeli" last year, will again coach the club. It is probable that "Disraeli" will be repeated shortly after the December play.

PRESIDENT HAS A FINE EXPERIENCE

John R. Thomas, President of Railway Trainmen's Lodge,
No. 321.

Stomach trouble is the direct cause of more derangements of the nervous system and general bodily functions than any other ailment. No other remedy has been accorded the instant success that has been obtained by Plant

JOHN R. THOMAS.

Juice, the new herbal stomach remedy—a vegetable combination of nature's remedies for the blood, stomach, liver, and kidneys.

The following is a statement from Mr. John R. Thomas, who resides at No. 924 Page street, McKees Rocks, Pa. Mr. Thomas, for the past nine years has been Secretary and now is President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen's Lodge, No. 321, and is also Chairman of the Grievance Committee of the P. C. & Y. R. R., and one of the best known and most popular railroad men in the United States. He said:

"For the past five years I have suffered from stomach trouble. My liver was sluggish, and I always had pains in the region of my kidneys; my food fermented in my stomach, and it would 'repeat.' I was always constipated, and at times so sick I was unable to do my work, and suffered untold agony from my stomach. I had heard of Plant Juice and tried one bottle of it. Improved from the very first, and have now taken it for only a short time and my stomach does not pain me any more. I can eat any kind of food and digest it perfectly; my kidneys are working fine, and the pain has gone from my liver; the constipation does not trouble me any more. I unhesitatingly endorse Plant Juice and gladly recommend it."

Stomach, liver or kidney trouble may be indicated by any one of the following symptoms: Headache, backache, dizziness, poor appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, fermenting of food, gas on the stomach and palpitation of the heart, etc.

The Plant Juice Man is at The People's Drug Store, corner 7th and E Sts. N. W., where he will daily meet the public, and introduce and explain the merits of this remedy.—Adv.
